

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions, including sales, purchases, and expenses. It emphasizes the need for a systematic approach to record-keeping, such as using a ledger or accounting software, to ensure that all financial data is properly documented and organized.

The second part of the paper focuses on the importance of regular reconciliation of accounts. This involves comparing the company's internal records with external statements, such as bank statements or supplier invoices, to identify any discrepancies and ensure that the books are balanced.

The third part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of inventory. This includes tracking the quantity and value of goods on hand, as well as the cost of goods sold. Accurate inventory records are essential for determining the company's profitability and for managing cash flow.

The fourth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of fixed assets. This includes tracking the acquisition, depreciation, and disposal of long-term assets, such as property, plant, and equipment. Accurate records of fixed assets are essential for determining the company's net worth and for managing its capital structure.

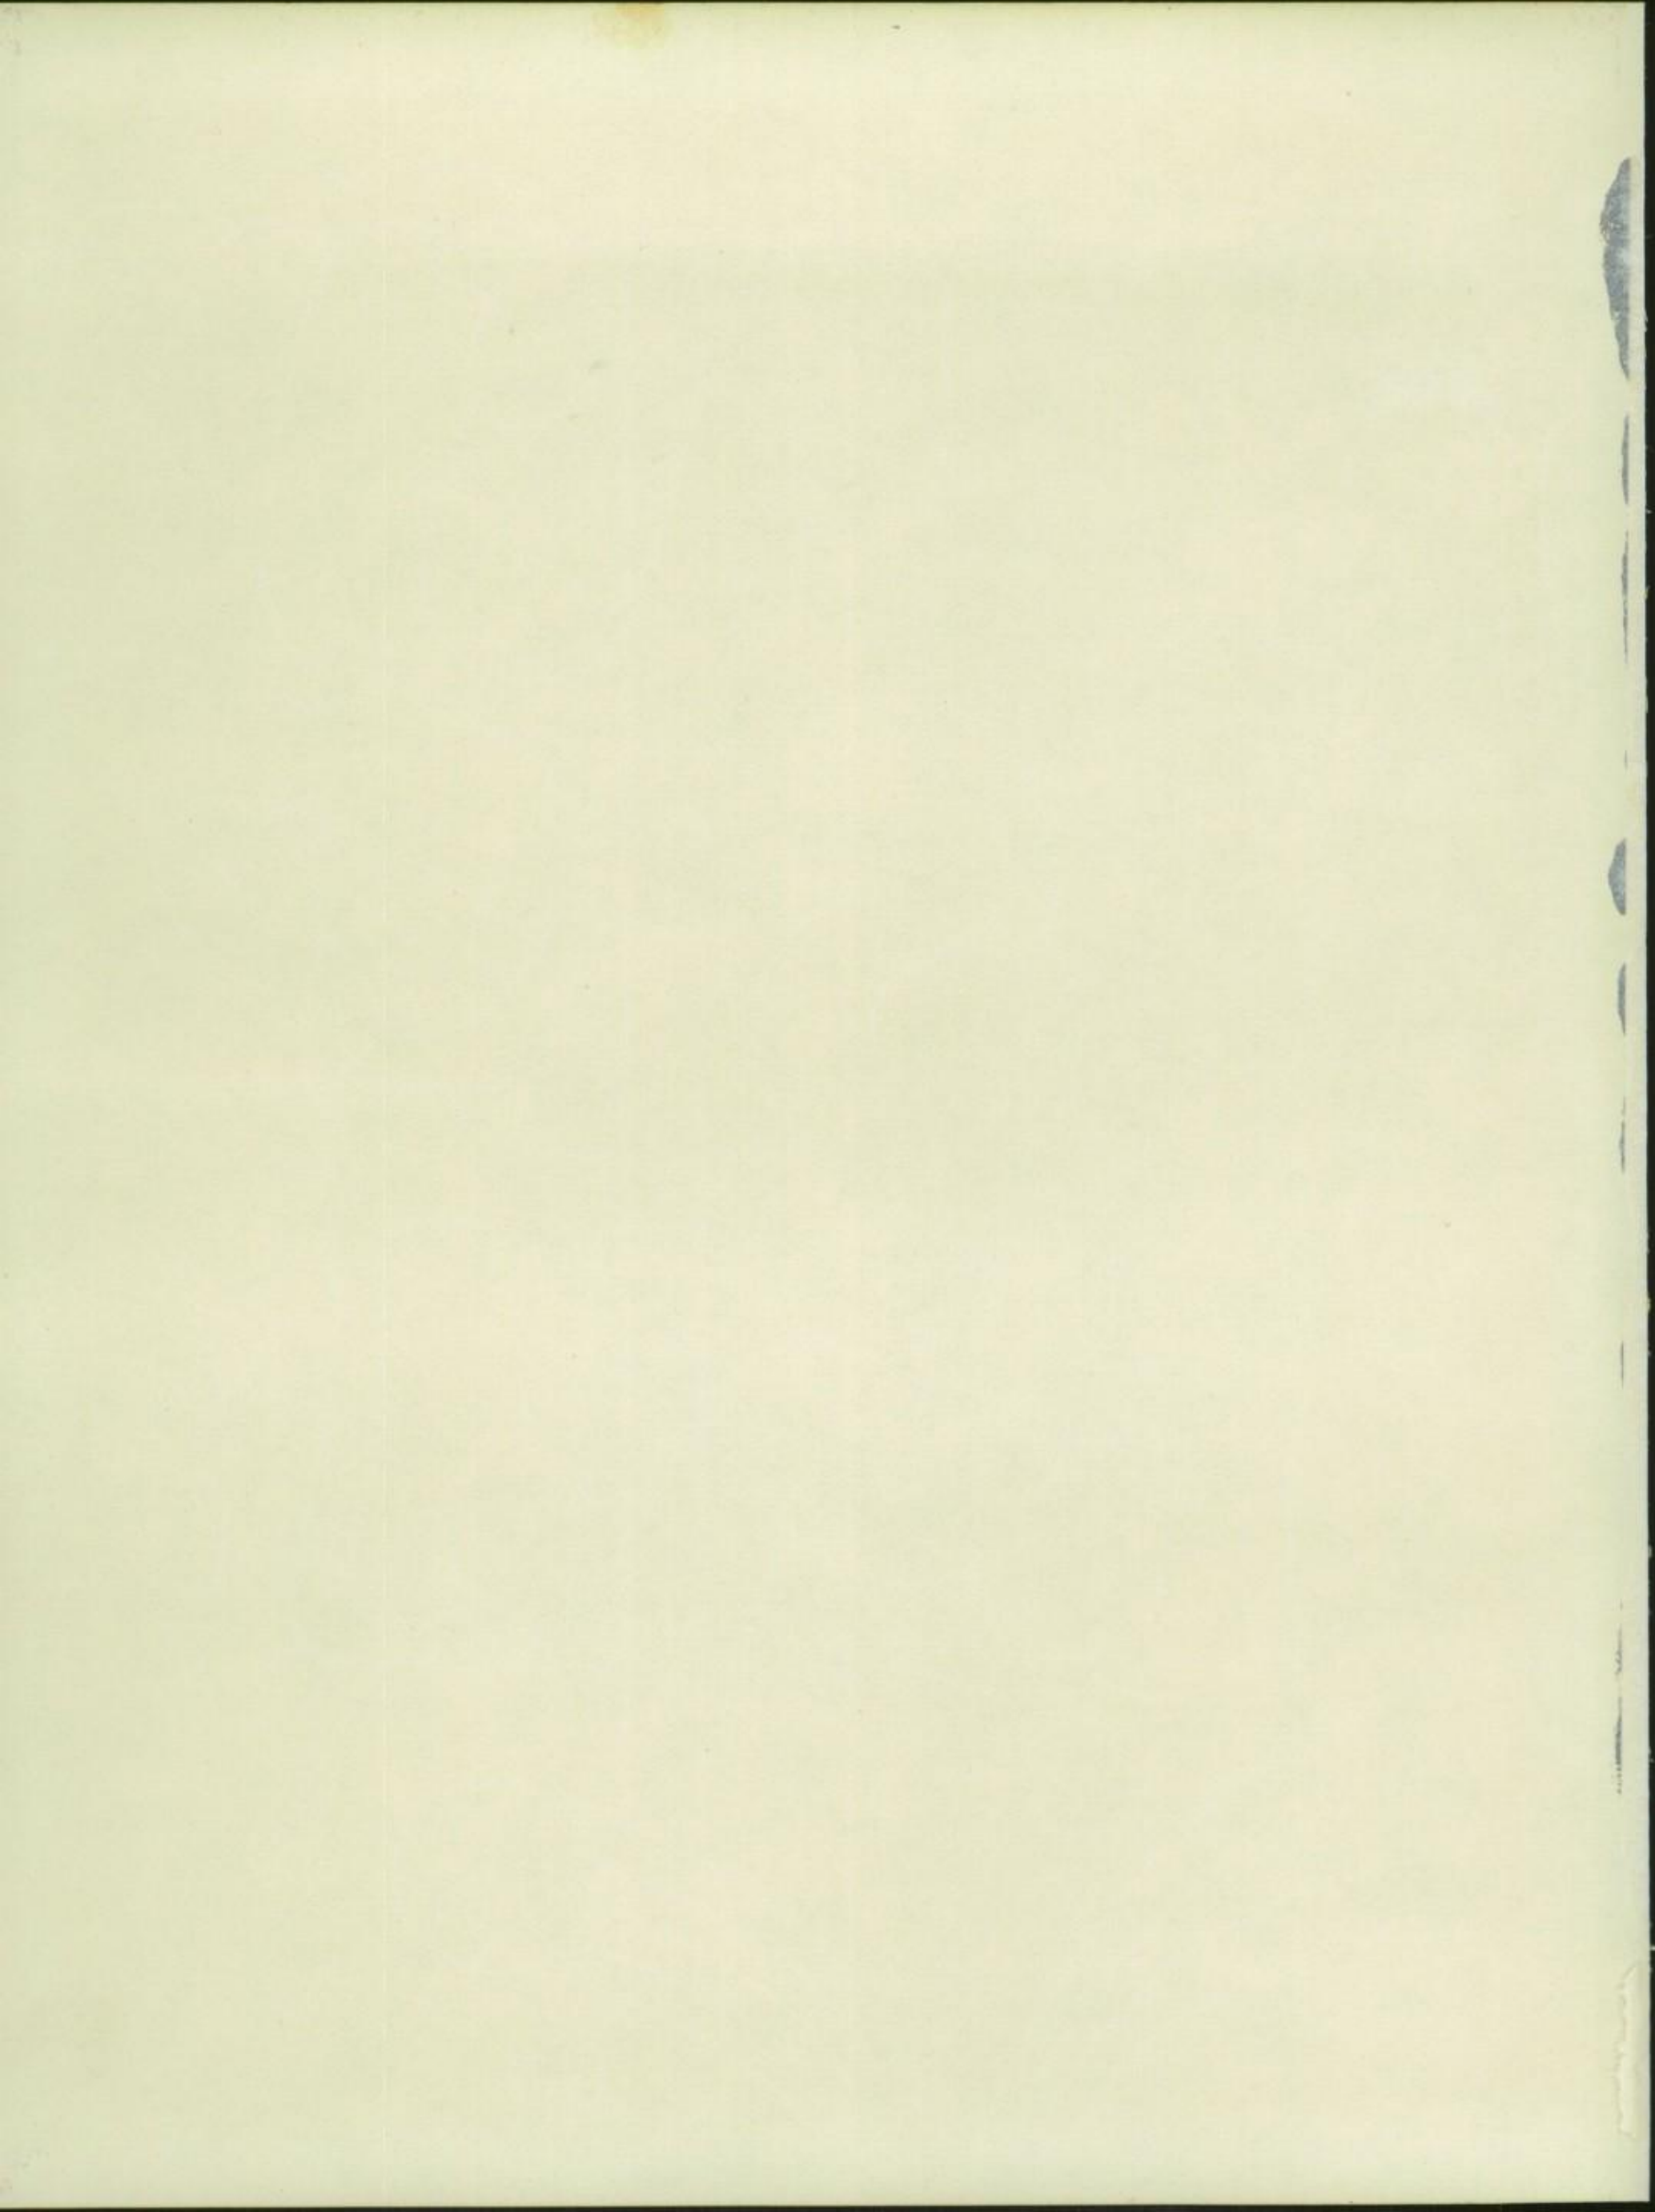

The fifth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of liabilities. This includes tracking the company's obligations to creditors, such as loans and accounts payable. Accurate records of liabilities are essential for determining the company's solvency and for managing its debt.

The sixth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of equity. This includes tracking the company's ownership structure, including the number and value of shares outstanding. Accurate records of equity are essential for determining the company's net worth and for managing its capital structure.

The seventh part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of taxes. This includes tracking the company's tax obligations, such as income taxes, sales taxes, and property taxes. Accurate records of taxes are essential for determining the company's tax liability and for managing its cash flow.

The eighth part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of other financial information, such as cash flow, budgeting, and forecasting. Accurate records of this information are essential for determining the company's financial health and for making informed decisions about its future operations.

In conclusion, the paper emphasizes the importance of maintaining accurate and complete financial records for the success of any business. It provides a comprehensive overview of the various types of records that should be maintained and offers practical advice on how to organize and manage these records effectively.

Well, it has happened again. Just like everything else, this year is at its end. It seems like it was just yesterday that we were looking forward to this year and not back at the memories that it has brought. I wish all of you luck in your years to come and I do hope that this book will bring you many memories of your high school years, practically the most important years of your life.

I wish to thank my entire yearbook staff. What would I have done without them? I would like to thank Bonny Davis and Lucy Andrews for their help as assistant editors who were always dependable and understanding. I would also like to express my appreciation to Jackie Mangan for her help as layout editor; to Jennifer Springer for her contribution to the class sections; to Tina Aulita for her imaginative mind for copy; to Don Davidson, Jay Martin and Ken Beil for their help in the darkroom and their wonderful photography; to Robert Neitzel, staff artist.

A special thank you goes to Mr. Clayton Verge, our advisor. Thank you for being so reliable and putting up with us through our good and bad days.

A very sincere thank you to Mr. Jerry Gladstein, our representative from Jostens American Yearbook Company; to Mr. Coy Pigman, Mr. Paul Virgadamo and Miss Ann Good for their constant support throughout the year; to all the teachers who understand the hassles and confusion that a yearbook deadline can bring and to our parents who also understood this. Thanks to all my friends who helped me through the tears and confusion.

I wish the best of luck to the class of 1980 and to next year's yearbook staff. I wish all my love to the graduating class of 1979 and I hope that their future holds all their dreams and hopes.

I guess that I won't see you for awhile, but your face will still be in my mind. Yes, I will always remember you.
